

brandbook

the latent brand book defines the foundation of the studio. it ensures every element — from the mark to colour to typography — works together as one cohesive system across every touchpoint.

the story

latent studio is an ai-native visual studio in amman, working with brands anywhere.

we produce campaign-grade brand imagery — the kind that used to need a photographer, a stylist, a location, a retoucher and six weeks — and we produce it in days. no camera. no studio. only direction.

we do not sell files. we sell an ongoing visual department on retainer, sitting outside your payroll, holding your brand to one standard every week.

we say "ai" out loud and never apologise for it. the tool is not the point. the pores, the grain, the one wrong thing in the right place — that is the point.

to render the image a brand already contains but could never afford to shoot — and to make it real enough that nobody asks how it was made.

to be the studio brands hire when the image has to carry the brand: not the fastest, not the cheapest — the one whose frames people believe. ai is the tool. taste is the craft.

logo suite

the primary logo is a typographic wordmark built around the word latent in lowercase. the schwa — ə — replaces the "e": the most common vowel sound in human speech, and the one nobody notices. present everywhere, seen nowhere. this wordmark is the main identifier and should be used most often across the brand.

the schwa replaces the "e" — cut from the same optical size, a letter, not an icon

always lowercase.
never title case, never caps

no tagline is ever locked to the wordmark

latent

the icon is the schwa on its own. it is our symbol, our avatar, our signature and our sign-off — it closes every caption. minimum size 24 px on screen, 8 mm in print.

the logo lockups bring the wordmark, the icon and the supporting line into cohesive compositions. these variations allow the brand to adapt across different contexts, from signage and printed materials to digital platforms.

clear space on all sides equals the height of the schwa's counter — the enclosed space inside the ə. nothing enters that zone. never stretch, rotate, outline, add a gradient or a shadow, recolour outside the system, or place on a busy photograph without a scrim.

the ground. ninety percent of everything: wordmark, symbol, body text, dark surfaces, the studio void behind every product.

ivory

the surface. paper, packaging, screens, light layouts — where the brand speaks about itself.

marrow

editorial accent only. a punctuation mark, not a fill. one element per layout; a single character set in marrow on a page is the entire campaign.

charcoal

the lifted black inside photographs. blacks are soft, never crushed; this is where they settle.

bone

skin and paper in light. warm, never orange. highlights roll off here and never clip.

oat

the warm mid-tone of generated imagery: linen, card, stone. image tones, never brand fills.
